

My word for this Second Sunday is justice and righteousness.

Justice and righteousness express a Marian hope and expectation. Pope John Paul II in his apostolic letter, *Rosarium Virginiae Mariae*¹ advises, "In order to supply a Biblical foundation and greater depth to our meditation, it is helpful to follow the announcement of the mystery with the proclamation of a related Biblical passage, long or short, depending on the circumstances." These Personal Notes will begin to look for relevance between the Sunday readings and the Rosary. Since Rosary is often capitalized when referring to the Roman Catholic devotion,² these notes follow that practice. The Christmas Season seems conducive for such a beginning.

Isaiah 40:1-5, 9-11

verse 3

A voice cries out:
In the desert prepare the way of the LORD!
Make straight in the wasteland a highway for our God!

The idea here is a new Exodus.³ The original exodus is out of Egypt, the new one out of Babylon. Later Christians refer to Christianity as the way, an Exodus out of sin and into righteousness.

verse 5

Then the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all people shall see it together;
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken.

This verse refers to a return to an original monotheism whereby there are neither kings nor priests intermediating between the people and their God. This refers to a type of democratization of religion.⁴

Once one grasps the meaning of God, the need for a good intermediary becomes heart felt, the need for Jesus, Mary, and Joseph. Carroll Stuhlmueller, C.P., regards Isa 40:5 as the principal “meditation” and “memory” book for Psalm 97. Reading 15ABC, the Christmas Mass at Dawn and 61C, the Seventh Sunday of Easter use Psalm 97.

verse 9 Go up onto a high mountain, Zion, herald of glad tidings;
 cry out at the top of your voice,
 Jerusalem, herald of good news!

Carroll Stuhlmueller, C.P. points out “YHWH is surrounded by lesser deities (called angels), as in any number of biblical passages (1 Kgs 22:19-22; Psalm 29:1; 58:1; Isa 40:1-8; Job 1:6, 12).”⁵ Zion and Jerusalem seem regarded as angels. More importantly, Zion and Jerusalem are symbols of the souls of the Faithful, wherein the herald of grace resonates against the politics of the world.

verse 10b who rules by his strong arm⁶

During the Visitation, Mary proclaims *He has used the power of his arm.⁷

Isaiah is prophesying justice at the new Exodus, an Exodus Christians regard as liberation from Original Sin into the life of Grace, by “the power of his arm.”

Psalm 85:9-10, 11-12, 13-14

The antiphon is verse 8.

Mark 1:1-8

The Baptism of Jesus is the first Mystery of Light of the Rosary.

verse 1 The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God.

This beginning probably refers to the whole book, but it may also refer to verses 2 and 3 as a parenthesis.⁸ Many scholars regard verses 1-13 as a prologue to the whole Gospel of Mark.⁹

This is “the gospel not as preached by Jesus but about him.”¹⁰

he will prepare your way.
A voice of one crying out in the desert:
“Prepare the way of the Lord,
make straight his paths.”

Mark 1:8, below, because of the way it is repeated sometimes the same, sometimes differently in Matthew, Luke, and John, helps make the argument of many contemporary sources for the Gospels.¹¹ Scholars generally accept Mark as one source available for all the other Evangelists. Scholars also generally accept a Q source, though with less confidence. By the Q source is meant a reliable source other than the surviving Four Gospels. Justice and righteousness are tempered by the realization that the Gospels are very human documents, though Divinely inspired.

Justice and righteousness have a lot to do with verse 8.

verse 8 I have baptized you with water;
 he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit.

John's baptism justified within the parameters of the law. Scholars quarrel over just what is meant. Some say this middle Jewish period (300 B.C.E.-200 C.E.),¹² before and after Jesus, held a sterile view of the law. Some, following Josephus, say justification had an important racial aspect.¹³ Others, based on Saint Paul, say that nonmessianic Judaism at the time of Jesus was dynamic, including an attitude of heart. Perhaps because he was concerned about hearts and souls, Saint Paul had a pessimistic view of human nature.¹⁴ In contrast, middle Judaism was optimistic that salvation was on its way. As one scholar puts it, "Paul criticizes the boasting and self-righteousness arising even from covenantal nomism."¹⁵ The term nomism derives from the Greek for law.

Particularly relevant to the readings for this Sunday is the scholarly comment that Mark 1:4 and Luke 3:3 say that John preached "a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins." When this is taken alone, it sounds like a call for an atoning activity done within a covenantal nomistic context so as to "stay in" the people of God who will survive the last judgment.¹⁶

In other words, the passage seems to involve a touch of racial ethnicity.

verse 4 John the Baptist appeared in the desert proclaiming a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins.

Paul polemicized against "works righteousness," against understanding the law "as a summons to human achievement"¹⁷ According to Saint Paul, depraved humanity could do no good by itself; incorporation into the life of Christ was required. Ethnicity and race had little to do with it, especially insofar as the Gentiles are concerned. Incorporation into the life of Christ meant that only kindness, gentleness, and maturity are acceptable. While only grace saved, works composed the test for justification.¹⁸

The Transfiguration Mystery of Light. Just as Jesus was transfigured, so are the Faithful transformed and empowered with the image of clothing in Saint Paul. "As many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ" (Gal 3:27).¹⁹ As one scholar puts it, "Christian behavior is fruit of the Spirit (Gal 5:22-23) ... It is all of grace!"²⁰

Justice and righteousness are prophesized in Isaiah, and reflected in the antiphon where the Faithful pray, "Lord let us see your kindness" in one another. 2 Peter reminds the Faithful that "we await new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells." Luke and Mark remind the Faithful to "prepare the way of the Lord."
